Museums receive a great deal of public support, and their services are a high point of New Zealand culture. One of the most attractive things about museums is that their products are largely free. Make sure to make the time to visit a museum as a community of engaged citizens. Visiting a museum can be an important part of community engagement. Museums offer significant local and national significance and can help encourage community cohesion, civic engagement and learning about New Zealand's history. With online access to a wide range of local, national and international museums, museums are accessible to all New Zealanders as well as overseas visitors to New Zealand. Museums should be accessible to all New Zealanders, as well as overseas visitors. Museums are often used as community and cultural centres for local people and for tourists who want to learn about New Zealand. Museums can be public or part of privately owned collections. Museums are funded through a range of means, including the private sector, government funding (both central and local government), and philanthropy. Museums have their own fund-raising activities to generate revenue, such as ticket sales and donations. They can be open any time and are very much 'flavour of the month' for several months before closing, then reopened and closed for a time and then re-opened, etc. The Museums Branch has provided the following resources to help promote your museum. They can be viewed under the Museums link in the 'Lists and Resources' section of this website. Remember, to do the best job possible, it is best to put your times and dates on the calendars, for you and your visitors. This way, people may plan their visit to your museum, or to the events held at your museum. The Museums Branch, under the guidance of the Museums Advisory Committee, also'sponsors' the Homecoming Festival each year. This
