Dawson Creek a community of colours "Do you have any desire to live in a place like this?" It was a question that had been asked of me many times since moving to Dawson Creek nearly two years ago. I am a seasoned traveller, but some places are almost impossible to leave. Dawson Creek is that sort of place. For starters, it is a real metropolis, with all the amenities of a small city, but with a population of just 11,000. There's a major university, a TV station, a hospital, a railroad, an industrial park and so much more. And it is beautiful. With a stretch of beach along the confluence of the Chetwynd and Nechako Rivers, an endless expanse of lawns and gardens, and the most impressive view in all of the North. And there are more colours here than you'll ever see in Edmonton. For starters, you'll see every colour under the sun in a matter of minutes. The green of the lawns and gardens are the colours of the spring. The hues of the beeches and maples are the colours of the fall. And the ever-changing hues of the evergreens are the colours of the winter. You'll 77a5ca646e
