In this review the different methodologies used in measuring cancer-related neuropathic pain are discussed, and reference is made to the methods by which neuropathic pain is defined. Epidemiological studies are presented and meta-analysis techniques used to quantify the prevalence and incidence of neuropathic pain are reviewed. Case studies of different types of cancer in which cancer pain management has included neuropathic pain treatment and a discussion of the effects of neuropathic pain treatment are presented. The first-line drugs used to treat neuropathic pain and their effectiveness in the management of patients with cancer are reviewed.O: Is there a way to keep a certain number of rows after applying a filter? I am developing a budget system for school and it is based on two lists: budgetlist - containing all the money to spend. It's sorted from lowest to highest and there are no duplicates. usedlist - containing all the money the student has already spent on his/her assignments, classes and bills. Basically, my code is in three steps: Select the number of rows I want to use in the list 'usedlist' from this situation: 'Usedlist' Contains 'Beliebte' and 'Neben' 'Beliebte' - Contains all the courses already assigned to this student (which are in the 'budgetlist').
