Also, it introduces a new character to the film. It’s the turn of Val, Caesar’s personal care assistant. Val is possibly the most obscure character in the entire series, and whilst most fans recognise her as Caesar’s “Personal Care Assistant”, what exactly is a personal care assistant? In the rebooted series, Val is the personal care assistant for all the apes on the new planet. The reason for her having this title is because, in a previous film, Val saved Caesar’s life. It would appear that after Val saved him, and he turned to her in gratitude, she became his assistant. In the rebooted series, we see that Val is most certainly a servant for Caesar. She walks behind him, carries things for him, and helps him get dressed. Val has a limited role in the film, but what she does say in the film is enough to give us a rough idea of what her role was in the previous films. In the film, she speaks in a British accent, but before that, when Caesar is at the the site of the firefight with the humans, we see that Val is there with him. She’s held something in her hands, but we can’t see it. Caesar and the rest of the apes are jumping over bodies that have been killed in a firefight. Then, in the midst of this chaos, we see the thing that Val was carrying. It was a small cage. The scene is very important because we see that Val was taking something to Caesar, something that was kept in a cage. There has been a lot of speculation surrounding this. Some say that it’s a chimpanzee that was ripped from his mother, and
