Since its inception, the A-4E and A-4F Skyhawk have been the premier Close Air Support (CAS) aircraft for the US Navy. These highly agile, deadly little warplanes have acted as 'Scooters' for decades, attacking and defending the carrier strike groups and supporting elements of the carrier battle groups. FSX - A-4 E/F takes these legendary fighter-bombers and puts them up to date with the latest technology. A powerful radar-guided bomb and air-to-air missiles allow the Skyhawk to be a potent CAS platform. After many years, new Skyhawks have found their way into the Aerosoft game and FSX - A-4 E/F, an 'A4E/F' model is included in the Steam FSX-A package. In fact, the model is a very faithful reproduction of its real-life counterpart, with extensive 'carrier-catapult-and-landing' compatibility. The Skyhawk has an almost 'unrealistic' weight and balance, and a simple design, which were created to assist in the transition to a true 'carrier' flight model, as well as to give as many hands-on features as possible. The aerodynamics of the Skyhawk are based on the civilian and the USAF -186 wind tunnel data, while the shape comes from 'hobby' X-Plane models. On board, an APG-53 radar, J19 ACOG gun, radar altimeter, and 'laser' gyro, complete with visible and audible warning lights - providing crucial information to the crew during flight. The A-4F, or the Royal Australian Navy (RAN) 'Hawk' was delivered to the RAN in November 1995. It is of the 'honeycomb' (HCM) version and can carry a single 500 kg Mk82 Free Fall bomb and a single TSS-11M Coyote missile. Features:

Realistic Aircraft Factory (RAF) wartime datalines, with slightly higher mass. Non-turbine engines, using an automatic gearbox. Carrier-catapult launch and landing compatibility. Carrier-launched munitions and missiles, complete with an illustrated user manual. High quality native 3D models Realistic switch and knob 'click' sounds A new digital recorder for the M-35A onboard Ioran. High c9d1549cdd

The adventure highlights Bakingqa's investigations into the pink skin man and his death at the hands of a human in his youth. While some of the more well known details of the death of the pink skin man have been lost to history we are able to retain the core aspects of the original. Devil of Dark Wood is a stand-alone adventure and requires no previous experience in the A-Series by AAW Games. If you have prior experience with the A-Series but not the 5E ruleset then a quick run through the experience system will set you up nicely for the adventure. The adventure includes three new maps, an illustration of the tavern floorplan, and various optional activities to add to the already existing encounters. The four encounters in the adventure have been extensively researched to provide rich details to the GM and a balanced experience for the party. The optional soundtrack can be downloaded for free, courtesy of the work of Michael Horne. The optional experience system to further the adventure introduces three new items including a fetish doll which can be upgraded to gain additional bonuses. This can also be used as a custom encounter. Story Background: Bakingqa was raised in the dark world of Amatoula, the pink skin village, and was taught from a young age to revere the church and its leader. His lessons began at a young age with the teaching that the Church embodied "the truth," "the good," and "the right" while the "devil" was evil, corrupt, and false.
