Dirty Blood is the first studio album by English rock band Bullet For My Valentine. It was recorded at California World Studios and mixed at Pressure. The album was released on 12 October 2007 in the United Kingdom, and on 27 September 2007 in the United States. Lead guitarist and songwriter Matt Tuck commented on the lyrical content, saying: "The whole Dirty Blood era was kind of when I was at my happiest. It was when I was most depressed, and though the words might not be pretty to look at, they're the only way I felt I could express my situation. That term 'dirt ball' was my favorite – it summed up exactly how I felt inside." Bullet For My Valentine placed the album in at number three in the UK Albums Chart on 24 October 2007, following the release of their second album Temper Temper. The album debuted at No. 38 on The Billboard 200, selling over 7,000 copies in its first week. It reached No. 1 in the United Kingdom. Production and writing Following the recording of The Poison and recording of The Summer of Love and Fiction, bassist Jason "Jay" James and drummer James Bourne were asked to play drums and bass respectively in a band called NOFX drummer NOFX announced he was taking a break from recording music, due to his assaulter's parole not allowing him to visit the group's tour schedule, while vocalist Matt Tuck was asked to do some guest vocals on a NOFX song, Inborn Errors, "I guess that's a good omen for this album", said Matt when asked about recording with NOFX frontman Fat Mike, "and it doesn't happen every day that you have a dude who you've listened to growing up as a songwriter, you know, for decades". Mike also suggested to the band that Tuck could use the song Inborn Errors to record a rap rock song, that would later end up being called "Let It Die", and lead singer Matt added he was "gonna go back and see what that other song was". Thinking that "NOFX were going to get the rights to the song [Inborn Errors], Jay ended up dating [NOFX drummer] Fat Mike's cousin just to get the rights back". One day before the band started recording The Poison, they were told by Virgin Records that a rumour had been spread around the net saying they signed to Virgin and that was fake news, as Virgin just thought that it would be a good idea to hear

Created in game engine Unity 3d with a pixel art style, and released under creative commons. As the player, you play as an astronaut tasked with terraforming a barren lava world to support life. As you click on comets, earth lumps, and gas-teroids, you increase the mass and temperature of your planet, ultimately reaching equilibrium. Balance all of these resources with temperature to make your planet happy and life-sustaining! Be careful though, because adding too much mass to your planet can cause it to implode, ruining all of your hard work so far. As you play, you will discover that there are many ways to balance your resources. Planting trees is the simplest, but most expensive, way to increase the mass of your planet. Each of the 72 games in Lumpy! has different objectives. Some of them require precision, others require speed. You can plant trees at different distances from the center of your planet. This will cause your planet to gain mass at a different rate and, ultimately, a different mass. The farther you plant from the center, the larger your planet will be as it gains mass. Planting them very close together causes your planet to increase its density faster. Each level also has a number of orbiting bodies that can be used to add mass. If you are low on mass, you can use them to increase your mass by a predetermined amount. If you are high on mass, you can use them to decrease your mass by a predetermined amount. Reducing your mass causes a sudden decrease in temperature and the planet will implode before it is happy, creating a hole in the middle of the game. Your overall objective is to create your ideal world. It should be habitable, but, more importantly, it should have a happy balance of resources. Too much water content and your planet will become warm and life-supporting. Too little water content and you may have to contend with a desert, or you will be left with a barren world of ice and rocks. Balance it correctly and you will create your ideal world. Inspiration: A planet that's too hot or too cold, not enough resources, or a world that didn't implode for some reason. Oh, and I'm a big fan of alien and sci-fi worlds.
