Get in touch with us Q: converting array to hashmap vb.net 'this doesn't work Dim teams As New Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) For Each team As Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) In teams For Each player As String In playerList team.Add(player, New List(Of String)(New String() {player})) Next Next A: You need to initialize the value first. That is, this: Dim teams As New Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) should look like this: Dim teams As New Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) From {{"foo"}, {"bar"}} or even better Dim teams As New Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) From {{"foo"}, {"bar"}}.ToArray() Note that I also changed the type of Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)) to Dictionary(Of String, List(Of String)). The old C# code is not going to work in VB. You should stick with the new dictionary type. I hope you liked my two minutes of car theater. If anyone is interested, I can provide more images of the damage. If it can be of any help. He got hit in the back and it hit the radiator and the rear fender. Plus the back of the car next to the bumper was smashed in the front and the window and the front fender was off. Looked like a fighter plane hit it.

The Legendary Warlord, You, is a hero that appears as a major character in the Tarnished World of Ginnungagap. It is no exaggeration to say that your hands hold the destiny of both worlds. You have incredible power and abilities, allowing you to easily dispatch both humans and monsters with your bare hands. That being said, an empty personality and a loveless attitude to life makes You a dead man walking. After you were delivered from the prison in the Demon Gate of the Black Abyss, you woke up in the mundane world and began to wander. You are a penniless vagabond who could not refuse the kindness and offers of others. -Title: You -Age: 27 -Current Location: Ginnungagap, the ordinary world -What is the Tarnished World of Ginnungagap? It is a world where the dominion of gods was lost. Everything was lost because of the meddling of the gods. The world is always in the darkness, shrouded in shadow. A Conservative MP who is running in a party leadership race called for the suspension of parliament for the duration of the inquiry into accusations that Westminster journalists may have taken bribes. Nicola Blackwood, the Conservative MP for Oxford West and Abingdon, made the suggestion to party members at a meeting in Brighton, Channel 4 News has learnt. The suggestion was rebuffed, and the MP said she would raise it with other interested parties, including the then Prime Minister David Cameron. But she told Channel 4 News that if the rumours of pervasive corruption are proven to be true, it would be a "huge black mark on the reputation of the British government". The inquiry into allegations of journalists accepting bribes to expose wrongdoing at the Libyan regime, has been given a brief, but is expected to complete its work at some point next year. There have been concerns that the inquiry could take longer than expected because it is looking into hundreds of claims, some involving alleged payments of £10,000, as well as a second inquiry looking into leaked documents which appeared to implicate defence and foreign office officials. But if no wrongdoing is found at the end of the inquiry, Ms Blackwood told Channel 4 News: "There's no requirement for any further investigation. People should assume that the inquiry is complete and there's nothing else to investigate." She said the suspicion of journalists being complicit in corruption "is very much why I want to see an inquiry, because if it is true, it is a real black mark on the reputation of the British government. "It's a very serious matter, it's something we should take very seriously. If that's the case, it will not be acceptable," she added. She said it was inappropriate to suspend parliament if nothing is found. "If it is proven to be true, that will affect the way in which the British government is perceived by countries around the world. "If there is nothing there, the government should assume that the inquiry is over and there is no requirement for further investigation. I believe that's entirely appropriate." But the former Scottish MP, Ken Macintosh, said suspending parliament is what happens when there is a high-profile criminal investigation, with the Prime Minister always given the power to order it. He told Channel 4 News: "I don't think they would ever do it, partly because I think they would rightly feel it would be too extraordinary, but I think there
