EA SPORTS to bring you the game with its most authentic and cutting-edge gameplay ever. ESPN Films' 30 for 30 series, which examines the best moments in sports, has worked with EA SPORTS to bring you the game with its most authentic and cutting-edge gameplay ever. FIFA and ESPN EA SPORTS joined forces with ESPN Films' 30 for 30 series to create and deliver a story to the game.

"The NBA, NFL, NHL, MLB, NASCAR, and college sports have all tested our code and in every case found our engine to be the best solution on the market. With this partnership, we're now able to open FIFA to new sports that don't have traditional sports games, like the PGA Tour and even the Olympics," said Aaron Wanderlich, managing director of the ESPN Films 30 for 30 series. "Even though this is a new format for us, we knew that this was the direction we wanted to go, and it's exciting to see the beginning of it all with FIFA." The first step of the process involved an extensive agreement with Epic Games, which helped develop and distribute the FIFA franchise for more than a decade. After Epic informed EA

SPORTS that it wouldn't be seeking a license for the upcoming FIFA, the two companies began the search for a developer in early 2015. "We aren't looking for a partnership with ESPN Films because they have an interest in the NHL, a sport we're going to be covering," said Colin Massie, managing director of EA SPORTS. "Instead, we're looking to support the growth of soccer, a sport we think is underserved by traditional sports video games, and by doing so we can continue to innovate and drive the esports category, which continues to grow in popularity around the world. We're excited to work with ESPN Films and see what develops as the story continues." FIFA at the Olympic Games FIFA was added to the Olympic Games program with the release of FIFA 16 in September 2015, and with this update is added to the Tokyo 2020 Olympic Games. The Olympic Games is the world's premier international sports competition. The Olympic Stadium is the largest stadium in Japan, with a capacity of 95,000. "Whether the game is played on the pitch or on the street, EA SPORTS FIFA's unmatched authenticity matches the game's real-life counterpart," said Michael Davies,

What's new in Fifa 22:

- NEW GAME WORLD: The sun shone bright and the rain was non-existent on the opening day of the 2018 FIFA World Cup™. The songs of the chosen hosts echoed across the streets, parks, stadium and rooftops of Russia. A new FIFA World Cup gives you access to your own PA System, that connects you to the streets and all the sights of the host cities in FIFA World Cup.]]>>Photoresponsive molecular conical helix is an intermediate in the photoisomerization of alternating copolymers made from nematic and semiconducting diblock copolymer. The blue, liquid crystal-directed irreversible photoisomerization of a series of diblock co-polymers made from nematic poly[(9,9'-bis-n-decyloxy-(3,3'-bis-2-ethylhexyloxy)-silole)-2,7-)-2,7'-dimethoxy-1,1'-biphenylene and poly(3-octylthiophene-2,5-diyl) blocks in the nematic-rich phase by UV irradiation are shown. The co-polymer contains the photochrome tetrathiafulvalene-2,2'-bipyridine moiety, which allows the oligomerization as well as the photoisomerization of the principal arms. The degree of polymerization between the tetrathiafulvalene units is quantitated by electron paramagnetic resonance spectroscopy. The time and light-dose dependent photoinduced isomerization is only partially reversible with the retardation in the thermal relaxation of the remaining isomer. The reversible (nematic) and irreversible (twisted) states are verified by small-angle X-ray scattering. The photoisomerization is correlated to the irradiation at the wavelength corresponding to the electronic absorption spectrum of the oligomer. Conformational changes of the block copolymer heads are monitored by X-ray diffraction in the orientation-selected nematic phase. This experimental approach is interesting since the possible equilibrium populations of the molecular conical helices are deduced from the population of the right- and left-handed isomers. If the block copolymer retains the
