Highlights include: Personalized Player Styles New Player Physics and Impact Engine More Tactical Options New Controls for Better User Interface The announcement can be viewed below. Want a closer look? Click here for a closer look at the key features, screenshots, and more details. Improved Player Intelligence FIFA 20 introduced the first major overhaul to player intelligence since the introduction of player abilities and ball control in FIFA 14. This made it possible for players to react intelligently when under pressure, as well as make intelligent decisions for their team during key stages of the game. FIFA 22 builds on this by further enhancing the intelligence of each player. This includes: More strong tactical decisions based on player intelligence More accurate interaction with teammates in team defensive structures More accurate reaction and ball control in off-the-ball situations More accurate intelligence in key phases of the game such as first through third phases, set pieces, and those close to goal When defending, players will react more accurately to danger and counter-attack more intelligently. Intuitive controls and a balanced field of vision make this easier to achieve. In addition, the engine now includes more checks and balances when determining the best tactical or strategic decision. For example, a direct free kick is not automatically awarded if the player in the centre of the box positions himself just outside the penalty area. Sometimes the player simply misses the spot or takes a pull back, or the player receives a bad touch, so the best decision will be to make the free kick on the edge of the penalty area. FIFA 22 also introduces a number of improvements to the player intelligence engine to improve the player interaction with teammates. For example, AI teammates will quickly pass the ball to open players when they are pressured and in a better position to receive the pass. Players can also communicate better with teammates to execute a collective plan, for example by making a run into the box before the player receives the ball. FIFA 21 also introduced defensive AI, which helps teams make correct decisions when defending. Defenders now understand the structure of their opponents and will sometimes look for weaknesses to exploit when defending in 1v1 duels. Key Features: Enhanced Player Intelligence FIFA 22 also introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete
