Some of our customers choose to download video drivers straight from the manufacturer's website or directly from a proprietary driver vendor such as DriverLoader.com. These free drivers are usually not a bad idea, but only if you fully read the license agreement and run a virus scan before downloading. Please be cautious and make sure you have a good, clean virus protection program installed. Try to avoid proprietary drivers. If the manufacturer provides a proprietary driver, it's probably not "clean" and may even contain a virus. Sometimes the only way to get the latest official driver is to download it directly from the manufacturer. Look for a DriverGuide link and follow the instructions to find the driver you need. If you can't find a DriverGuide link on the manufacturer website, try the manufacturer's Customer Support page. Check for driver updates in your Device Manager.
