Find the global maximum and global minimum of  $f(x)$ . I am stuck on this function. I see where the max/min is on intervals and have not really found anything on a global level yet. I am trying to find some way to separate the function into products of separable functions but I have not been able to do so. Any help/hints/pseudocode/pointers are appreciated. A:  $f(x)$  is continuous everywhere, so the maximum will occur where the derivative is zero. And of course  $f'(x) = 2x + \sin(x)$ . So the maximum will occur where  $\sin(x) = 0$ , or  $\sin(x) = -2x$ . Which of these will occur depends on the sign of  $\sin(x)$ . The function never crosses an odd multiple of  $\pi$  because  $\cos(x)$  is always positive or negative. So there will be a maximum when  $\sin(x)$  is positive. Using a little trigonometry, we also find that when  $\sin(x)$  is positive, then  $x$  is close to  $0$ . Added: You can find the minimum, just like the maximum, by setting  $f'(x) = 0$ . From what we just saw, the minimum will occur when  $\sin(x) = 0$ . In other words, a minimum occurs when  $x \approx 0$ . Alistair b7e8fdf5c8
