i wanted to know if it possible or not. A: The code must be executing to leak memory, the first few instructions themselves are in no way a leak. They are legitimate instructions that happen to be loaded to RAM, and by the time the code is getting called they're already executing and have a valid return address. Demartines v Haldi (2015 NY Slip Op 04590) Demartines v Haldi 2015 NY Slip Op 04590 Decided on June 3, 2015 Appellate Division, Second Department Published by New York State Law Reporting Bureau pursuant to Judiciary Law § 431. This opinion is uncorrected and subject to revision before publication in the Official Reports. Decided on June 3, 2015 SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK Appellate Division, Second Judicial Department WILLIAM F. MASTRO, J.P. LEONARD B. AUSTIN SHERI S. ROMAN ROBERT J. MILLER, JJ. 2014-06615 (Index No. 4829/12) [*1]Rene Demartines, appellant, vPasquale Haldi, respondent. Pfau, Pfau & Nathanson, LLC, Flushing, N.Y. (Mark W. Nathanson of counsel), for appellant. William C. Martin, III, P.C., Syosset, N.Y. (Jennifer F. Zimmerman of counsel), for respondent. DECISION & ORDER In an action, inter alia, to recover damages for personal injuries, the plaintiff appeals from an order of the Supreme Court, Queens County (Hart, J.), dated May 13, 2014, which denied that branch of her motion which was for summary judgment on the issue of liability. ORDERED that the order is reversed, on the law, with costs, and that branch of the plaintiff's motion which was for summary judgment on the issue of liability is granted. On March 2, 2010, the plaintiff commenced this action against the defendant, who was operating a motor vehicle owned by his employer. The plaintiff alleged that she was a passenger on a bus operated by the defendant when

C. Crawley. Research conducted in the past 20 years has challenged the conventional framework of Maya history in which there was a little-understood gap in time between the Classic and Post-Classic period. The latest evidence shows that the so-called gap was considerably longer than previously thought, and that the coastal societies prior to the arrival of European colonists had many connections with the great cities of Central Mexico. The hypothesis that Mesoamerican sites all arose from a single original site is not supported by new evidence that shows complex, hierarchical societies with regional and national identities arose across the lowlands. Geographical dispersal The earliest sites of the Formative are concentrated on the coasts, while the Classic to Post-Classic Maya are located in the interior of the lowlands. Archaeology of the Classic Maya in Mexico, Guatemala and Honduras is the most widely studied and most richly evidenced, but the sites are clustered in the northern lowlands and north-central plateau. The Classic period societies of the coastal lowlands are the least understood and least explored, despite the fact that they lasted from the 4th century BCE until at least the 14th century CE. Until quite recently, the prevailing view among archaeologists was that there was a gap in time between the rise of cities of the south and the great coastal cities, and a similar gap before the rise of the great interior sites. It was assumed that during this period the Maya chose not to build cities, having abandoned the coast after a great war that culminated in the destruction of Tikal, so that after this time the Maya retreated to the northern lowlands, where they were no longer able to defend their huge cities. This assumption is now being re-examined. An extension of each society to its hinterlands, plus major expansions of the periphery, is documented by the sites of the Classic period. Artifacts excavated at sites e79caf774b
