Working with a team of 22 world-class movement capture experts, PES 2017 takes the acceleration, speed and position data collected from the world's best players and uses it to create the most realistic simulation of football. Today, we're joined by Akihiko Yamamoto, the Technical Director at PES Development Team, to discuss this major new technology. Akihiko Yamamoto, Technical Director at PES Development Team "I don't need to say this, but I am honored that I am allowed to speak about PES 2017 at Electronic Sports World Cup 2017. It is the first time I appear at such event. "Myself and other members of PES Dev Team are working hard to deliver you a top-class football simulation game. We don't just develop FIFA and PES games for us but we also design and create games for PlayStation consoles. "In order to give game-players more levels of control, we added the Real Pitch Control system, the goal system, shooting and dribbling actions and many other functions into PES 2017. From PES Game Concept Stage, we made a variety of prototypes and demos. These demos were tested by the members of PES community in overseas. We are looking forward to seeing those innovative ideas and impressions that players all over the world post on your social media accounts. "Finally, I would like to say that we would love to hold Worldwide online matches with you soon. The PES website is currently under renovation but it should be ready for play in a few days. We would be delighted to tell you more about that once it is ready. "I am looking forward to connecting with you via this Electronic Sports World Cup. Thank you very much." "Back in October last year, we had held a Technical Review Meeting with the development team where we evaluated and implemented the 'HyperMotion Technology' to PES 2017. The result of the evaluation was outstanding, which meant that we could release the game that was fully playable on the PlayStation 4 on the
