Features Key:

A Solo RPG: A single player experience where the use of friends and the various elements of the game to continue are taken in consideration at the heart of the action experience.

Imminent Threats: Dynamic encounters that come alive as you explore the world are the norm.

Customization: Each of the important aspects of your character will allow you to experience important side quests that are deeply connected and bring you closer to your character.

Clear System (Split System): War. War on all fronts. The battlefield is divided into zones for each faction, and when the number of units in a zone is reduced to less than 20% or increased, the center will automatically turn into a state of war. At this time, faction-specific equipment will be applied, and duel mode will be turned on and off automatically for each zone. All independent action systems are supported in every zone.

Goal System: Accomplishing goals will increase the character's level, and battle rewards will be brought in line with your level. Depending on your level, you will be able to use abilities to overcome threatening enemies, initiate combat with powerful allies, find various weapons and equipment.

Hard Modes: The mission difficulty and enemy combativity will increase for each new stage. However, as you play through the game, your experience levels will be expanded, allowing you to challenge missions repeatedly.

Strategic System: You can expand your territory to secure resources or establish a base that festers, and your allied characters will grow stronger.

War Between All Factions: Character selection in the new game is not only a matter of selecting your weapon, but also of selecting your heroes. You will not only experience a variety of quests, but will also be able to change your faction in the new game.

Absolute Feedback: Pros and cons for defeating certain enemies will allow you to see the difference between the strengths and weaknesses of your character.

Easy Quests: Quest availability will be limited to periods when you can get along with the mission conditions. High-level quests that take a lot of time will be available in the latter part

Influence of electromagnetic interference on the dose rate measurements and biological effects of ^{131}I in Swiss mouse. Routine measurements of the dose rate of ^{131}I used in the medical radioisotope production are routinely performed. When the source is changed, or the counter is contaminated by electromagnetism, dose measurements are prone to errors. This study evaluated the effect of electromagnetic interference (EMI) on the dose rate measurements and on the biological effects of ^{131}I in Swiss mouse. For these purposes, the source change was simulated by interrupting the ^{131}I beam and a parallel beam was used to mimic the EMI, when the counter was operated at a few places, at different times and by changing the counter direction. In a further test, the source change was simulated by placing a copper object between the source and the counting plane. A series of biological experiments was carried out, a detailed description of which is given elsewhere, to assess the effect of electromagnetic interference on the absorbed dose in Swiss mouse. The absorbed dose was analyzed by means of a Monte Carlo radiation transport program. The absorbed dose increased by 3.2%, on average, as a result of source changes. A simultaneous EMI pulse of a few nanoseconds did not alter the dose rate in the biological experiments. Larger EMI pulses of 30 microseconds and 2 ms increased the dose rate by up to 6.5%, which was reflected in the biological experiments. A parallel beam with the counter in the opposite direction increased the dose by up to 6.7%, depending on the dose rate at the entrance surface. The source change increased the absorbed dose in Swiss mouse by 3.2%, and simultaneous EMI pulses of several microseconds, but also of a few nanoseconds had no significant effect. +0000{04A06B99-169E-41C5-A2B3-BFE309F42EE8} has the lowdown on every aspect of the upcoming movie starring Chris Pine and Zachary Quinto. Though you can't tell at first glance, the special effects in the trailers don't look anything like the ones put together by ILM - it appears that there will be a large portion of the effects added on later. If that's the case, then there's little to worry about from a technical standpoint. But it's still a cause for concern - the film's co-writer and co-director just recently pulled a similar stunt with the very successful "The Dark Knight". Considering that poor story is sure to be terrible, it was best to shelve an ill-conceived project rather than putting it on the back burner. "The box office is the thing that concerns you, right?" he told Entertainment Weekly, but he quickly tweaked his answer to note that it also depends on whether or not Star Trek has "a smart story that goes somewhere that makes sense and is emotional. If it does, the box office will be with it because it's got some legs." Sadly, there's also the danger that a questionable box office number that has three weeks to build momentum will be enough to start a downward spiral. At some point, people will either decide to move on with their lives or it will turn into a semi-permanent box office hangover. For more on the movie and to learn just how fast people will drive to a theater to see it, check out TrekCore's report. Per

All Done =)Q: Zend_Mail_Storage_Imap self removing attachments
I'm trying to create a ZF2 module to send some documents via email. These documents are received by the user via a web form and he then has the option to save it or delete it. Upon saving and deleting an attachment which is stored in a custom db on the server should be sent as well. The problem is that the entire attachment is deleted from within the Files_Imap_Storage_Mail class when using the deleteAttachments($attachment); method.

The reason why the attachments get deleted is that we use a custom library which deletes attachments. This should not be important and I can access the File-instance and get the attachments from there. My question is: Is there a way to make sure that this custom library removes the attachments? A: You can specify all attachment you want to delete by setting the 'files' parameter to a truthy value in the initialize() method of your plugin.

$storage = new Files_Imap_Storage_Mail();
$storage->setOptions(array( 'files' => true )); $filesStorage = new Files_File_Storage(array( 'basePath' => APPLICATION_PATH.
'/../../' )); $filesStorage->setAdapter($storage);

$filesStorage->setOptions(array('files' => true)); To add all attachments to this storage by default it's enough to change the $storage initialization to look like this:

$storage->setOptions(array( 'files' => true )); This configuration will result in calling Files_File_Storage::rename() whenever you remove an attachment.
