An action adventure game inspired by the events at the Berlin Wall in the early 90s. Who We Are: We are a small independent team of game makers based in Berlin. We're looking for artists with the know-how and audacity to make our dream game a reality. Enjoy the show. About This Content The Ocean's 8 soundtrack features an eclectic mix of artists from both the video game music world and the Berlin techno scene, and runs at over an hour minutes of pumping beats alongside chilled ambient music.100% of proceeds from OST sales go to the artists!muuutsch Almut Schwacke, aka muuutsch, is a member of the All Walls Must Fall team and developed the procedural music mixer that the game uses to sync the action to the music, and also created all the sound effects for the game. She's contributed tracks to the soundtrack that define the core sound of All Walls Must Fall.Jukio Kallio Jukio Kallio, aka Kuabee, is responsible for some awesome video game soundtracks, including Nuclear Throne, LUFTRAUSERS, and Bleed 2. We were so excited when he agreed to make a track for the All Walls Must Fall soundtrack, and we're really hope we can put the track in-game. He says he was interested in the game because of "the fact that, to me, Berlin is kind of 'the techno place' and that AWMF takes it to the near-future, I can still have freedom of what that future techno could sound like."Ben Prunty Ben Prunty is the composer who made the soundtracks for FTL, Gravity Ghost, StarCrawlers, Dead Secret, and the upcoming Into the Breach. He also performs electronic music live, and teaches music production on his twitch show, Music Workbench. He loves tacos and won't shut up about Deadly Premonition. He says he's excited to contribute to All Walls Must Fall "because I love the uniquely focused setting. The game has such a bold, confident style that it's hard not to get swept up in it."Kuedo Kuedo is the alias of Berlin-based Jamie Teasdale, formerly one half of the duo Vex'd, whose 2005 album "Degenerate" re-wrote the UK bass rulebook. Kuedo's acclaimed 2011 debut album 'Severant' astonished

This mod is an experimental version of the HTC Vive. Now it will render the Vive support and Vive is the only choice for your HTC Windows VR game. What you need to do this mod. We need to add - D3D11Adapter.dll on the Platform SDK folder, that is a PC Windows D3D11 driver. And we need to use a downloader to download the Vive driver from official website and include it on the same PC. This mod turn the game to a VR mod. I will release it on steam when the Steam VR support released. I'm working on this mod for 2 years. I just updated the game again. Now you can download the patch version. DO IT! Last version have bug. // Anyway, Steam is updated! It's steamvr on the game now! Just update your steam client and it should work! // What's new? Updated the armors. All types are compressed into one file. Improved c9d1549cdd

You start the game with a small inventory of three items. Move around the level to find hidden key cards. Each key card provides the player with the ability to use an in-game powerup. Once the player collects the desired number of powerups, the player is brought into a boss battle. Afterwards, the player will be given a time limit to reach the next level. After splashscreen is shown, other applications are started. Other applications that are started are excluded by exception. There are many uses for splashscreen, for example, launching of an application, giving a busy signal to the user, and giving a warning message. Splashscreen programs are available for several languages. Some of them run on all computers that run Java, and some can run on only on specific computers. Splashscreen is one of the easiest ways to run a program that shows a splashscreen without

What's new in Cuboid Keeper:

Monday, November 23, 2011 Wanted to share a quick update with everyone. A few days ago another email landed in my email, inviting me to see a live show of Snow White & The Huntsman at the Gibson's flagship store in San Francisco's Union Square. I thought it was a bit strange that they weren't advertising it on their own but then I realized they were probably doing it for the same reason I'm doing this blog entry here. In other words, to get more publicity. So of course, it was a no-no for me to pass up such an opportunity. I take the word of the secondary or tertiary media above the first hand info, in hindsight, because sometimes I've seen articles that later turn out to be wrong.Like a lot of us bloggers out there, I have a major case of sour grapes lately. When they announced the long-rumored Prizzi ad campaign earlier this month, it turned out to be the lone ad they were running in the States this year. Actually, they're still running it through the end of January. Which isn't much in this economy. So big kudos to them for keeping up the momentum on it. However, news articles have come out over the last few days that the Prizzi Campaign ad has been pulled from TV as well. In an email to Ad Age, a spokesperson for TriStar Television's alternative program unit, which is part of Sony Classics - which brought The Crying Game to the big screen - said, "At this stage, we are only running one ad per show until after January 31st 2012." She didn't give a reason why. So, if anyone knows what's going on, let me know.Also, I want to thank everyone at this blog who has left comments, I greatly appreciate them. Perhaps I'm flattered by such admiration or maybe I'm just due for a higher level of service. Just kinda whateva. Advertisements Categories Total Pageviews Tuesday, July 6, 2010 To all my Internet friends out there, I'm sorry if this reaches you late. Basically, I get my news from the local paper, in this case the Los Angeles Times. But one day as my daughter was mixing ingredients for her birthday cake I heard the news that Woody Allen was stepping down as director of Midnight in Paris. I was thrilled and more than a bit surprised that the film will be released on December 25th, the same day as Midnight In Paris
