database using MS Access 2013. I need to know the model and database name in MS Access. A: You may use the following two commands to get it: `SELECT Model, [Schema], Name FROM MSysObjects` `SELECT Model, [Schema], Name FROM MSysObjects WHERE Type IN ('R', 'V', 'M')` "Model" is the name of your database, "Schema" is the folder of your database. It is preferable to use the first method, as this one also returns any libraries that are linked to your database. However, if you want to save the path of your database in your project file (.accdb), it is easier to use the second one. Also, if you have linked your database to a table or a module, you can also use the second method. A: You can get the model name by opening Access with the command line (this assumes you have the Access Runtime installed, you can download it here):

Access.exe /mod Then you can get the model name by opening Access with the command line (this assumes you have the Access Runtime installed, you can download it here): Access.exe /mod A: 1. In Design/Modify View Open a connection to your database; Select
