More particularly, the present invention relates to a method and apparatus for providing an improved soft handoff in a communications system. Cellular telephony, also known as mobile communication, is rapidly becoming the most widely used method of telecommunications. The term xe2x80x9ccellularxe2x80x9d is used to denote a radio coverage area that is divided into a number of spatially isolated smaller areas called xe2x80x9ccellsxe2x80x9d. Each cell in the cellular radio coverage area is serviced by a separate base station. Thus, in a cellular communications system, a mobile station can be in communication with up to three base stations at one time (termed a xe2x80x9csoft handoffxe2x80x9d).
