

The game is FREE to play, but for the most part, you will be playing to win. You will find yourself fighting, gaining resources, and ultimately trying to win. With the regular fixings of base building, defense, upgrades, and some really good pacing, this is definitely the place to be. Ortus Arena is a competitive strategy board game online that is optimized for online play. Ortus Arena is currently under development and will soon be released in January 2019. You play the game as a warlord in a realm ruled by two different but brutal warlords. You and your opponent are at war, both vying for power over the cities, armies and lands. As the warlord of your faction, you can take the cities, armies or lands your opponent has conquered, and wrest more cities, armies or lands away from your enemy. Both players can be on equal ground, fighting for the same lands and resources, yet with the difference being that you have to take cities from your opponent first. After all, they might be the cities with the most troops defending them. In OrTus Arena you start out with a handful of troops and limited abilities to take over the world and crush your opponents. To strengthen your empire and eventually win the game you need to build up the cities, armies, armies and resources that are very important. The main three resources in the game are: 1) troops: These are the soldiers that you can build and equip to help you fight to conquer the world. 2) cities: These are the fortified cities that represent the heart of your empire and hold resources of their own. A great deal of resources can be stolen from other opponents' cities, or they can even be taken by simple force of arms. 3) Armies: This is what gives you the strength to walk the empire and its cities under your own rule. By building up armies, you can conquer your opponents' cities. You should always strive to gain the most cities, armies and resources, and whenever possible, you should take more and more cities from your opponents. After the meteorite impact and the subduction caused a cyclone, the ground of Pannonia is split up into four areas called "Zones" :Europa Zone (AKA: EU)Bosnia Zone (AKA: BJ)North Africa Zone (AKA: AA)Japan Zone (AKA: JZ) Players enter one of these four Zones, and assume control of a faction called "Army". Army's territory is split in 3 areas called "Contingents" :Red (AKA: Run)Blue (AKA: Hurl)Yellow (AKA: Spurt) Each Army has its own army faction (templates), but the Army's own units are all alike.All army units are divided in 3 types of units : Indicated as usual by capital letters (to be further specified with letters within parenthesis, when needed). First type are army regulars, that is the core of every army. Second type are upgradeable units. During each round of the game, each player is able to send his army to attack a enemy with orders. Each round ends once all units are eliminated (unless they are invisible, or out of the range, or if the player is dead). When an attack happens, it happens by orders : "Picking" a unit (which decides whether the attack will be directed to an enemy or not), "Attack" is the actual attack. "Combat" is the actual combat. "Victory" means that the attacking army is victorious. Here are the rules for Combat: When an army attack (either "Picking" a unit, or "Attack"), it goes through a "Stations" line. The order of the battle line are named by their number (starts from 1 at the end of Combat, and continues from 1 during Combat). After a battle, the armies move in the same direction (in order to not create dead-lock) until they get to the next order of battle line (except if they were on a forbidden zone, in which case they move to the first in-line order of battle). All armies go through battle in order. At this point, the current order of battle line of the enemy army is compared with the current battle order. The current battle order of the enemy army (that is,

"The most fun you'll have fighting baby purple elephants..." For all the wild and woolly fun of Ultimate Fight League, there's also a knife-sharp strategic focus. There are now five playable fighter teams, each with its own goals, preferred play style, and ability to pressure your opponent. The fights occur on a wide variety of arenas, from indoor to outdoor, in locations as exotic as London, Denver and Las Vegas, with the greatest variety and greatest likelihood of mass destruction ever found in a fighting game. Nova Crystallis's economy has been expanded so that it will now support more than one type of fighter; so, you'll be able to play with your friends as one team, or several teams, or single-player as every fighter in the game. The rules have been updated to make every fighter quicker and more effective, while giving more control to the players. Mushroom Kingdom: Welcome to the Mushroom Kingdom! This is a game of all your favorite characters from the Mario series. This game is set after Mario and friends have defeated Bowser for the first time. Now the kingdom is a more peaceful place due to the absence of those mean-spirited Bowser characters. There are also several new characters from the future who live in the mushroom kingdom. These weird creatures were not from this world, but were brought here by the mysterious big guy in the castle. The game of Mushroom Kingdom is pretty similar to Super Smash Bros. The only difference is that this is a fighter game, not a platformer. You will be able to play as just one character, or several characters on a team (that is up to 4). While you play, you will be faced with Bowser characters, enemies, and bosses, as well as characters from the future (the present) such as Stanley, Mama, and Jumpman. You will also have to fight against enemies from the past (the future). For instance, you will have to fight Falco from the Super Mario Bros. series. You will also have to help your favorite characters on their quests. For instance, you will have to help Luigi and Princess Peach get to Bowser. This game is also similar to the Punch-Out!! series, but unlike the original Punch-Out!!, you will not have to tap buttons to perform special moves. In the basic moves menu, you will be able to perform moves with a punch, kick,
