The value of the vertex is the distance to the center of the triangle. I would like to be able to get the maximum value of this vertex. I am using a "for" loop to go through the list, for each triangle. Here is my code : triangle_vertices = np.array([[0.0, 0.0, 0.0], [0.5, 0.5, 0.0], [0.2, 0.2, 0.5], [0.0, 0.0, 0.0]]) triangles = [(0, 1, 2), (0, 2, 1), (0, 3, 1)] triangle_angles = np.array([0.0, 90.0, 45.0, 0.0]) for i,j,k in triangles: for a,b,c in triangles: distance = np.linalg.norm(triangle_vertices[i,:]) if a!= j and b!= k and c!= j and c!= k:

Rates of women who are opting for preventive mastectomies, such as Angeline Jolie, have increased by an estimated 50 percent in recent years, experts say. But many doctors are puzzled because the operation doesn't carry a 100 percent guarantee, it's major surgery -- and women have other options, from a once-a-day pill to careful monitoring. If that's true, a woman who is 12 weeks pregnant and is addicted to opioids will often experience withdrawal symptoms that include diarrhea, nausea and vomiting. But she won't be experiencing muscle or bone pain. The pain that women are feeling is coming from the uterus, and no one knows why they're feeling it. Doctors call this a "paroxysmal" pain: one pain, followed by relief, followed by another. "Sometimes, these women feel much better when they're really sick with a cold or an infection, because it allows them to feel better," says Jennifer Endicott-Davis, a doctor in Pascagoula, Miss., and president of the American Congress of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. So why do some women feel worse in the later stages of pregnancy? One theory is that the syncytiotrophoblast, which lines the placenta, is not doing its job of keeping the uterine arteries open and blood flowing. This causes blood to pool inside the uterus, which causes the pain. Another theory is that the receptors responsible for pain are being made inside the uterus. The receptors, or ion channels, are made by the uterine lining and lie on top of sensory nerve endings. There's evidence that these receptors may be more sensitive or stronger after childbirth, which means they could increase in strength during pregnancy. Wendy Carbone, a pathologist at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis, has also studied fetal DNA, and she says her research suggests that after the fetus has been expelled, there is a type of receptor that can be found on the mother's nerves. So, in that theory, the
