Despite the introduction of potent immunosuppressive drugs, acute allograft rejection occurs commonly in adult patients who receive transplanted kidneys. One hundred and thirty-three adult kidney transplant recipients were studied to determine their risk of early acute rejection with long-term graft survival, in the absence of a significant degree of acute rejection, considered to be less than 10% of grafts on biopsy. Most patients had functioning grafts at the time of analysis. The actuarial probability of remaining alive with a functioning graft was 94% +/- 2% at 1 year and 88% +/- 4% at 5 years. When rejection-free grafts were used as the measure of outcome, patients were more likely to have a functioning graft than the general population. The prediction of graft survival was studied by dividing patients into three groups according to age, number of rejection episodes per patient, and risk group. Age, number of rejection episodes, and risk were the most important factors predicting graft survival. The highest probability of survival was predicted by patients of 16 years old with a single rejection episode. Age younger than 16 years and more than or equal to 60 years was associated with a significantly higher probability of graft loss compared with those aged 16 to 60 years (p less than 0.05 and 0.01, respectively). In addition, a greater than or equal to 6 rejection episodes in a patient with age 16 years or less had a significantly higher probability of graft loss compared 0cc13bf012

EU foreign ministers are due to vote on the new sanctions on Wednesday, with Italy reluctant to join other European Union members in approving sanctions against Israel. Thursday, June 13 - Italy voted against sanctions proposed by Germany, the Netherlands and Denmark against the Israeli Defence Force over recent air strikes in the Gaza Strip. The EU is considering new sanctions, with the decision to proceed coming just two days after 10 Israelis and a Palestinian were killed in a pre-dawn airstrike in the southern Israeli city of Netanya. German Foreign Minister Frank-Walter Steinmeier said on Monday that the EU has proposed new sanctions against the Israeli military as it puts more emphasis on the question of accountability. Italian Foreign Minister Paolo Gentiloni said this week that, as a result, it is unlikely Italy will sign off on the new sanctions. "We have to understand there are different sensitivities between different countries with regards to the sanctions against Israel," he

Walking the fine line: NLRP3 inflammasome and Parkinson's disease. Inflammasomes are innate immune signaling platforms that include cytosolic receptors and an associated adaptor protein, nucleotide-binding oligomerization domain containing protein 1 (NLRP1 or NALP1), that can in turn recruit and activate the inflammatory caspases, caspase-1 and caspase-11. NLRP1 inflammasomes are thought to regulate caspase-1 activity through their sequestration of pro-IL-1 $\beta$  within a multimeric compartment and promote the release of the inactive cytokine into the extracellular space. Two NLRP1 inflammasomes have been identified, NLRP1 and the recently described NLRP3. NLRP3 inflammasomes are increasingly recognized to participate in the regulation of innate immune responses. Here we review the current understanding of the role of NLRP3 in the context of the neurotoxin  $\alpha$ -synuclein, the principal constituent of Lewy Bodies associated with idiopathic Parkinson's Disease (PD), and discuss the potential therapeutic potential of the NLRP3 inflammasome.EPA issues proposal on greenhouse gases The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has released a proposal that would require the industry to cut greenhouse gas emissions from existing power plants by as much as 34 percent over the next decade. The plan released
