Q: Yui SlideMenu: -webkit-tap-highlight-color:rgba(0,0,0,0) removes click highlight effect when touching the menu item With YUI SlideMenu I want to highlight a menu item when user touches it. For that, I set: -webkit-tap-highlight-color:rgba(0,0,0,0) My problem is that, if the menu item is pressed by touching the menu panel, the menu item background color remains as it was clicked, but not highlights the item. I already tried to change the CSS on the generated HTML using jQuery: $("*[class$='-webkit-tap-highlight-color']").css('background', 'rgb(0,0,0)'); That works, but I would like to avoid this piece of JS. Any idea of how to fix it? A: After testing on Safari it's confirmed that the slide menu is not compatible with -webkit-tap-highlight-color. With CSS you can add a click handler to each button, and use highlightColor to change its background color: .yui3-tm-button a { /*... */ display: block; width: 98%; height: 15px; color: white; -webkit-tap-highlight-color: rgba(0,0,0,0 bc9d6d6daa
