Instead, I'm getting a WSAEWOULDBLOCK error from the AcceptEx() call. I've tried it with and without the socket options, but it always comes out as WSAEWOULDBLOCK. Any thoughts? Or, perhaps there's a better way to check for data available in the socket without blocking? A: I solved this issue by using my socket's HOLD_OPTIONS (e.g. HOLD_CANCEL_OPTION) flags instead of the AI_* flag I was using ( For example, if I set the flags with the socket(), this is what I see in the Windows Event Log: ReceiveAsync succeeded (WSA_IO_PENDING) Seconds to receive? [0.000 (0 seconds left) This is not an exact call-to-action, but it's the best I could come up with to solve this issue ( I'm going to leave it open in case anyone else has a better solution. Using Nanoparticles to Build Stronger Filtration Membranes Using nanotechnology, scientists have developed a new method to make stronger, more durable polymeric membranes. Their discovery could bring more efficient technology for water purification, and a cost-effective way to make faster food. "Your next-door neighbor, who is really smart, has a 13-year-old daughter who has a crush on her new friend," says Suresh Krishnamurty, who was awarded the 2007 Nobel Prize in chemistry. "Your neighbor's daughter has probably never had a kiss, but she might have to someday because it's not a good idea to be cruel to your daughter's friend. That's a love song. There's a solution to that problem, but it's somewhat difficult to find and it's not something that just grows on trees. "That's what we're interested in, and that's what we have achieved. We've been able to grow the probability of finding the material that we need for making the next-generation
