Its highly like that reset utilities will only appear for North American customers (as per Epson policy) and as it is one of the newer generation printers Epson will protect the utility with their new activated IPR utility so for those in North America you will have some hoop jumping to go through. I have a Brother HL-4170 and I installed Epson Color Master and used the default settings. My Epson printer or should I say the one with the scanner built-in is working fine when I scan and print but the second one is still having problems. I have reinstalled the software and it kept giving me an error like "Can't install" and "unable to open file". I then went to the webpage and downloaded the installer from them. After the download, I tried to run it through my CD reader and I get a ERROR message that says " Cannot execute the file" This makes me think that it's not the installer but the software. Can somebody tell me how to fix this problem? I have a new Epson printer. Sometimes when I run the color master setup it tells me that it is "unable to open file". when I try to run it again it tells me that it is unable to open the file. I then try to run the starter guide and it comes up with that error message. I have also tried reinstalling the software. Does anybody know what the problem might be?

It is possible that you will encounter a firmware error (program fault) during the initialization of your Epson XP-640. For most of us, the easiest and most common way to fix this is to load a previously saved settings from your computer (It does not need to be the same settings as current settings, in fact you might want to see what it is right now if it is different than current settings and then load it). Assuming that youre using Windows XP, please follow the steps below (note, this is a 3 button mouse setup): 1) Start XP, goto Run and type cmd then press Enter. (If you cant type in XP, make sure to press Ctrl+Shift+Enter). 2) In the command line window that opened up, type ipconfig and press Enter. (If you cant type in

XP, make sure to press Ctrl+Shift+Enter). 3) Locate the Network Interfaces under the Output list, You might see something like this: IP
